THE conemal of the Plague Proclamation for another month is an unwelcome but necessary measure. On the let inst. The matter had in the meantime! of the Sanitary Board, who urged the necessity of extending the proclamation for another month, pointing out that unless it was renewed the Committee's powers would cease also that it would be neither honourable nor houest to declare the colony uninfected while as many as six or seven cases were occurring daily, and, further, that no foreign Government would take notice of such a declaration while the newspapers and Consular reports showed that the disease still existed. There is no denying the soundness of the reasons advanced by the Committee. The disease being unfortunately still with us, it is essential that the powers of the Permanent Committee should be continued, and those powers are dependent upon the continuance of the Governor's Proclamation. It has been suggested that there is something wrong with a law which requires a proclamation declaring the Colony infected with a dangerous epidemic as the basis for such powers as those conferred on the Permanent Committee. introduced into the Public Health Ordinance cerned, whether there was a proclamat on or other-had a narrow escape. not: Quarantine has oden been declared against Hougkong when there has been no local cholera had occurred being deemed sufficient

Then we have the experience of Macao, a place in daily communica-

We observe also that one of our Tonkin contemporaries in urging a relaxation of the quarantine regulations in the ports of that colony uses as one of its arguments the fact that steamers from Hongkong call at Hoihow and remain there twenty four hours, that no case of plague has occurred at Hoihow, and that the importance of quarantine in. Tonkin is proportionately lessened. How the plague is conveyed is a point on which we have no definite knowledge, but the fact that ports which do not impose quarantine and which are in close communication it is said, being the Governor's cateror. with infected areas remain as free from the disease as ports at a greater distance where quarantine is strictly enforced establishes a strong paima facie case that it is not to the enforcement of quarantine that the latter owe their immunity.
